

SANDER MEISNER

b. 1979, Amsterdam

Sander Meisner is a self-taught photographer who uses medium and large format cameras to make analogue darkroom prints. Meisner's photographs of colorful spaces with complex visual patterns create a sensory overload. Most of the interiors he photographs are made of plastic laminate and are characterized by ephemeral design featuring colorful decorations and asymmetrical shapes typically used in 80's and 90's theaters, cinemas, casinos and similar buildings.

The interior spaces he photographs stand in stark contrast to his exterior spaces because these are mostly designed around their functionality and have been shaped in concrete and metal. His exterior views of buildings and the interior spaces however, are all boldly colored semi abstract images of architectural details.
